

Everyone who works with children, young people, parents, carers or adults within a family should

Top Tips:

1. Be aware of the needs of each individual in a family and how these may impact on the whole family's well-being.
2. Always listen to and respect Children and Young People's opinions.
3. Communicate with other professionals who can help the family, don't assume someone else is dealing with an issue.
4. Everyone working together for the same aim works better for everyone.
5. Share relevant information on time and in an open manner with families and professionals using language that everyone can understand.
6. Work restoratively with families to challenge and support them to address their needs.
7. Be curious, remain determined and don't be afraid to ask difficult questions.

Don't underestimate your ability to make a difference!

Everyone who works with children, young people, parents, carers or adults within a family should

Top Tips:

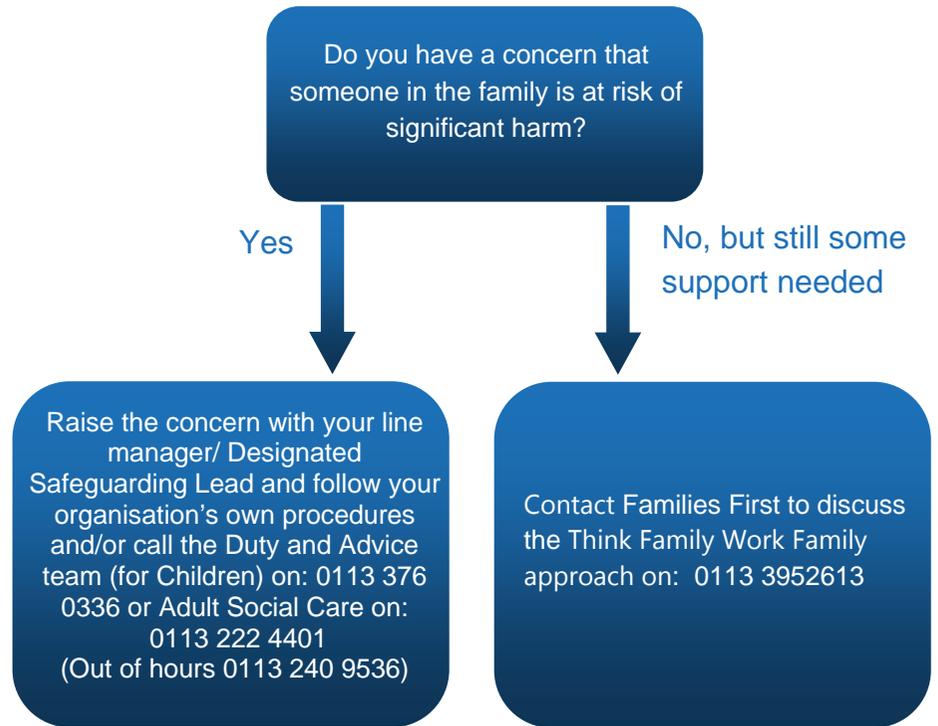

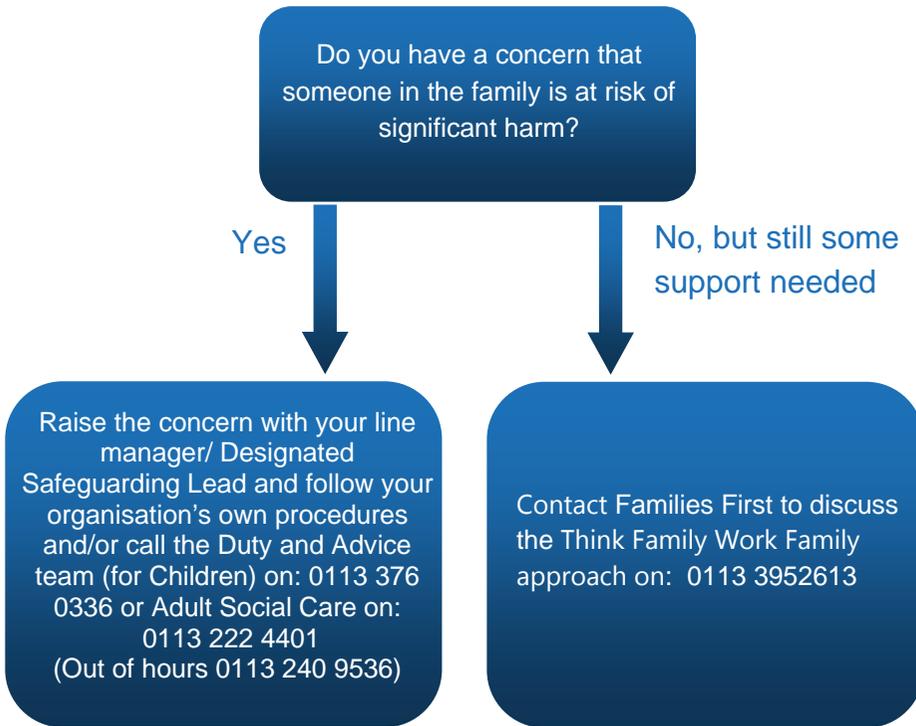

1. Be aware of the needs of each individual in a family and how these may impact on the whole family's well-being.
2. Always listen to and respect Children and Young People's opinions.
3. Communicate with other professionals who can help the family, don't assume someone else is dealing with an issue.
4. Everyone working together for the same aim works better for everyone.
5. Share relevant information on time and in an open manner with families and professionals using language that everyone can understand.
6. Work restoratively with families to challenge and support them to address their needs.
7. Be curious, remain determined and don't be afraid to ask difficult questions.

Don't underestimate your ability to make a difference!

Don't just think about the individual that you are working with. Recognise and respond to the needs of all family members in a holistic approach, by communicating with other practitioners working with the family and coordinating your efforts for the best outcomes.

Don't just think about the individual that you are working with. Recognise and respond to the needs of all family members in a holistic approach, by communicating with other practitioners working with the family and coordinating your efforts for the best outcomes.

www.thinkfamilyworkfamily.org.uk

www.thinkfamilyworkfamily.org.uk

